HONOURING OUR M.O.H.

BY RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

A group of public-spirited citizens are planning to honour Dr. C. J. O. Hastings, who for many years has served as Toronto's Medical Officer of Health. Under Dr. Hastings' administration Toronto has gained an enviable reputation internationally because of its health regulations. All citizens of the community are indebted to him. A fund is being raised to establish several scholarships at the University in his honour. If you have not sent in your contribution yet—you will thank us for reminding you—send it to Sir James Wood, Treasurer, 48 Front Street.

HOLY BLOSSOM'S FELLOWSHIP DINNER

When one reviews in one's mind the sad history of religious animosities, one cannot but rejoice that a dinner such as was held last Monday night at the Holy Blossom Synagogue Chambers is possible, where priest, minister, rabbi, and their followers broke bread together, and voiced the hope for better relationships between religious groups. The verdict of the meeting was unanimous that religious leaders and laymen should strive to foster better understanding among men. Not tolerance, as Father Burke put it, is wanted, but appreciation and sympathetic understanding. Men must begin to realize that though the ways of worship are varied, God is One, and they must act on that realization. To the teachers of religion particularly does the challenge come to foster good-will. Religion has been accused of fostering hatreds. It has lost influence with many because of that. It can regain that supreme influence in the life of the individual by leading in a crusade to make good-will not merely a glib shibboleth but a living reality. The Men's Club of Holy Blossom made a constructive contribution to the life of Toronto.

THE VOLKSVEREIN

The Toronto Jewish community is blessed. It has not only one Jewish charitable relief organization, but it has two. The one is the Welfare Society, the relief organization of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, and the other is the Volksverein, an organization of the masses. (The Hebrew National Association is an incorrect translation of Volksverein.) The Welfare Society is sponsored by the classes, and the Volksverein by the masses. The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies last year had a membership of about 1,200; the Volksverein of more than 2,000. The Welfare Society of Federation spent about $50,000 last year on family relief—more than $40.00 for each of its members. The Volksverein spent about $10,000 for eight months or $5.00 per member during two-thirds of a year.

Obviously the Volksverein has been reaching the masses as the Federation has not. The work done by the Volksverein supplements the work done by the Welfare Society. It spent one-tenth of its

PEACE-MEALS

We enjoyed a "good-will" repast the other day. There were over two hundred Christians present and at least enough Jews to make up a "mezuman" for grace. Our favourite waitress bubbled over with good-will—because she knew from experience that our tips were not illiberal.

We have known of good-will meals before. Many a time we drove past the Reveille Mission where hundreds of starving wretches were waiting for the Reverend Charboneau's good-will bread and soup.

Speaking of good-will meals reminds us of a little story we once read in Yiddish—cannot at the moment recall the name of the ghetto writer who wrote it. In the ghetto communities it was a custom that no banquet or gastric celebration was to be deemed complete unless there were present at least a "minyan" (ten) of poor Jews to participate in the festivities. The story describes the difficulties that the wealthy Jews would encounter in mustering the requisite number of mendicants for the necessary occasions. As a consequence of the demand there developed in each community a group of professional "celebration-poor" who set up and insisted on a definite tariff of fees for attendance at the various types of functions. And on one occasion a local chapter of the amalgamated union of professional banquetters called a strike for higher pay, and held up a very important wedding until their claims were settled.

Before long there may spring up in Toronto an organization of non-Jewish food-consumers ready to supply subjects in any quantities for all occasions of good-will.

Who noticed the report in the Jewish press last week of the organization in New York of a dinner for the purpose of promoting good-will between the Reform Jews and their Orthodox step-brethren? This is not a jest. It has actually dawned on some people that it might be worth while trying to bring about some sort of an understanding between the two wings of Jewry. Reform rabbis are falling all over themselves trying to clear away the distinctions which exist between their religion and Christianity, all the while being indifferent to the growth of the chasm which separates their creed from the rest of Judaism.

The situation is peculiar: We have Judaism—an historic religion, occupying a place in the realm of human experience with three or four other great religions. Which of these religions is the truest or rightest is not for us to discuss here. Each is the best for its own followers. Each is an historic fact, and, in a sense, is as ultimate as the fact of the universe itself. The Jewish religion like the other religions has its organon of doctrines, creeds, credos, dogmas, etc. Some fifteen million people are by the accident of birth professors of this religion. The vast majority of these fifteen million people accept the religion for what it is worth, according to it, for the most part, the same degree of allegiance as do the mass of the adherents of the other religions to their faiths. Now there is a small group of Jews who do not wish even in theory to carry the whole burden of the Jewish religion. So they discard the biggest portion of the impedimenta

At a luncheon given by A. Levin, one of the chairmen of the United Palestine Campaign in Canada, at the Mount Royal Hotel, Monday, February 27, Rabbi J. L. Zlotnik, executive director of the Zionist Organization of Canada, introduced Dr. Mossinson. Others at the head table included: Dr. Mossinson, A. Levin, R. A. Darwin, M. Greenspoon, Dr. Lauterman, Henry Weinfeld and Leon Goldman. M. Gelber, of Toronto, one of the vice-presidents of the Zionist organization of Canada, spoke. Dr. Mossinson thanked Canadian Jewry for their undertaking to redeem such an historic part of the fertile Plain of Sharon in Palestine for the Jewish National Fund. The Palestinian scholar, touching on the education work in Palestine, declared that the Hebrew educational system was the foremost of civilization in the East. Until now the Palestinians had looked upon the European as one who came only for commercial reasons or for the purpose of religious conversions, but with the coming of the Jewish pioneers, the Palestinians had realized that the Jews had come to stay and to build. "We shall build Palestine to be the link between the East and the West, so that the Orient and the Occident will hold hands with brotherly understanding and trust," Dr. Mossinson maintained.

room Sunday, February 26. Jewish students and co-eds of McGill, invited through the Maccabean Circle, were at a tea given for them by the Brotherhood of Temple Emanu-El Sunday, February

Harold Lande was elected to the committee handling the Arts '29 debating competition upon the resignation of
E. S. Fay. A meeting of the Maccabean Study group took place Sunday, February 19, at the Temple House, when Max Slapack and A. Kirschberg delivered papers on "Christianity and Mohammedanism with reference to Judaism."
Harold Blumenstein, student in third year law, was awarded a prize of $100 for an essay, entitled "Matrimonial Jurisdiction in Canada." Thursday, February 15, a McGill debating team, composed of H. Carl Goldenberg and J. A. Edmison, were awarded the unanimous decision of the judges, when they upheld the negative side of "Resolved that Canada's position on the Council of the League of Nations is inconsistent with membership in the British Empire," against a team representing Queen's University. On the same evening, a second McGill team, composed of Bernard Alexandor and W.
Budden, were defeated in endeavouring to support the affirmative of the same resolution at Toronto against Osgoode Hall. The Players' Club of McGill are presenting "The Bill of Divorcement," by Clemence Dane. Miss Gertrude Lerner, vice-president of the Club, will take the leading part, that of Sydney Fairfield. The B. team of the Chess Club, which includes P. S. Wise, was defeated.

FOURTH ANNUAL MOCK PARLIAMENT

The fourth annual mock parliament of the Dufferin Educational Society took place Sunday, February 26, in the Grill Room of the Mount Royal Hotel. Lyon W. Jacobs, K.C., made the speech to the throne. Mrs. Rose Henderson spoke for the affirmative on "Companionate Marriage," and Lyon W.
Jacobs for the negative.

Mrs. Henderson stated that her ten years' experience in juvenile work at the Court House, led her to agree with the findings of Judge Lindsey, that the egalizing of companionate marriage was not only an economic necessity, but would materially reduce crime. Lyon W.
Jacobs, K.C., upheld traditional marriage. The economic question would be as acute under companionate marriage as at present. Mrs. Henderson upon being asked what companionate marriage really meant, declared that any woman who did not have a child every year and a half or so was practising companionate marriage, and that every worthy minister of the gospel, every lawyer, every politician, had practised companionate marriage.

Other subjects debated during the evening were: "Resolved that successful suicide should not be punished by law";
"Capital Punishment"; "Resolved, that Canada adopt a freer immigration policy," and "Resolved, that bachelors be forbidden to hold public office." Julius Caesar, R. B. Bennett, Mark Anthony and MacKenzie King were brought forward to prove the last case.
Lyon W. Jacobs was the Governor-General of the Parliament, and in the absence of the "speaker" filled the latter role. L. Glazer led the government, and Sol Weber, the opposition.

Miss L. Schultz and Bernard Wall, of three Protestants, three Catholics and three Jews, and because of the diversity of legal opinion this commission reported to the government to leave the matter for decision to the Court of King's Bench, the Supreme Court and even the Privy Council.

The decision of the Court of King's Bench was favourable in some aspects in regard to the educational demands of the Jews. When the case went to the Supreme Court, this court stated that on fair interpretation of the statute, Jews could not be appointed to the Protestant board. The Supreme Court held, however, that legislation could be enacted establishing separate school providing such legislation not materially affect the rights of Protestants or Catholics, previous to 1867. Such legislation would be hard to enact, declared Mr. Bercovitch.

According to the speaker, the Privy Council affirmed the decision of the Supreme Court for the great part, yet the former body held that under the construction of the Act of 1903, Jews could sit on the Protestant board, but as this Act was considered "ultra vires," no deductions from its terms would be valid. In regard to separate schools, the Privy Council held that the legislature could enact legislation establishing them, if the legislation did not prejudicially affect the right of Protestants or Catholics. They gave as their opinion, that it was possible to enact such legislation.

MONTREAL'S DEVELOPMENT

Development in Montreal has been for years among the western section of the city where the moneyed interests are. The labourer and the workingman has been forgotten. No new homes for him have been built and no new subdivisions have been opened up. The time has come and is made possible by the extension of Sherbrooke Boulevard, new car lines and paved streets in the eastern end of the City of Montreal. Knowing of this coming demand, the owners of "Browne Manor" have appointed The House of Browne, Limited, selling agents for their property in the eastern end of the city. They will start an active campaign the beginning of this month and to help advertise and develop the property, they are giving preferred stock in the new company bearing interest at 6 per cent. to the amount of each purchase with each lot bought. This offer only applies to the first 283 lots sold.

A few years ago Guybourg was subdivided and to-day there are no lots remaining in the original company. When they started there were no improvements that we have there to-day. Ontario, Hochelaga, Boyce and Lafontaine Streets had not yet reached the property. Sherbrooke Boulevard then called Sherbrooke Street was far to the west of the location and to-day it passes right through "Browne Manor". Trams run north to Sherbrooke Boulevard one block west of "Browne Manor." Churches and schools are close to it and there is one school now on the property. The idea is original and the location is ideal.

WHAT A DISAPPOINTMENT!

Last Sunday we attended the banquet given by the Zionist Order of Habonim, at which occasion Dr. Ben Zion Mossinson, of Palestine, was the guest speaker. And we were disappointed. We are "chutzpadig" and conceited enough to state that we know Zionism. We know Palestine, having visited the land. And we know the leaders of the Zionist movement, having met them at the thirteenth Zionist Congress. And so when we are at a Zionist celebration and hear the trite and the commonplace about the Palestinian experiment we are disappointed. Mossinson just arrived from Palestine. And we expected a word of inspiration and information about the Eretz Yisroel of the present. We wanted him even to tell us of the economic struggles and achievements there. But what happened? He rehashed the old theory of Zionism. Its why and wherefore as a political philosophy, things that have been discussed thirty years ago. Matters that are debated on by boys and girls of the Young Judaea Movement to-day for mental gymnastics. He juggled with words and phrases about assimilation and anti-Semitism, toleration, and minimized the import of the French Revolution. He, however, did exalt the misunderstood and misinterpreted Balfour Declaration. And when he concluded we felt ourselves tired and disappointed.

And part of the disappointment came even before the introduction of the speaker. Since when have Zionists become so poverty-stricken, spiritually speaking, that they should be compelled to sing such service club "goyish" songs as "He's a jolly good fellow"? What about the soul-stirring melodies of the Halutzim—the songs of Bialik? Zivchu, Zivchu Tsedek, or Yiboneh Ha Mikdoch are more in place at a Zionist celebration.

We do not by nature belong to the class of grumblers. But downright honesty does not permit us to be silent when such fiascos take place. The author of this column may not be considered a "jolly good fellow" for having penned the above criticism. He is not one of those "yes, yes" rabbis. He is not a sycophant. He is seeking for the Truth and expects to find it in Zionism circles!

THE RIGHT TO BE HAPPY

We just finished reading the above-named book by Mrs. Russell. And there is nothing new in it. Happiness was philosophized upon by the Epicureans in the ancient world and recently by the Utilitarians. We do not care for the book because of its over-emphasis upon physical pleasures and excitements. We doubt very much if happiness is to be found in the mere gratifications of the instincts. Mrs. Russell ignores the pleasures of the intellect and the moral sentiments. The animal may experience mere physical pleasure. But man possesses the higher pleasures. Mill long ago proclaimed: "It is better to be a human being dissatisfied than a pig satisfied." And we ask with John Holmes, "How can we be happy when the right of happiness is still denied to the vast majority—when elemental human rights are not yet part of all peoples?" And how dare we be happy at a time when clouds of war are again making their appearance? The world catastrophe of 1914-1918 is somehow almost forgotten. H. G. Wells has recently written about the menace of war and drew the following word picture: "The other day, my wife and I were on the lawn of a pleasant seaside hotel; charming young people in pretty wraps raced down to the water to bathe; others came chatting from the tennis courts. The sea front below was populous with a happy crowd; the sands gay with children. The faint sounds of a distant band on the pier were punctuated rather quaintly by practice gunfire from a distant fort. Above us, in chairs of the most comfortable sort, sat the mature and prosperous, smiling pleasantly at the three military aeroplanes that manoeuvred overhead. . . . Across the trim turf came a group of military officers, discussing some idea of landing, of operations and so forth, and casting no shadow at all upon the smiling people about them. Just the same fine sort of fellows they were as sent hundreds of thousands of Englishmen to cruel and useless deaths in France." Such a scene as pictured by Wells brings anger to the thinking individuals. Anger at the ease and idleness on the part of many of us in such a world of death, danger and tragedy, and, if you please, foolishness. How can we, living in such a world, spiritually speaking be happy?

History of Jews Outlined at Honour Banquet

Zionism as the inevitable outgrowth of tendencies which had been in slow movement since the French Revolution, and as part of the natural breaking up of Europe into distinct states and nationalities was outlined Sunday night, February 26, by Dr. Ben Zion Mossinson, Jewish leader and worker in Palestine, who is visiting this continent, at a dinner of Zionist Order of Habonim held in the Mount Royal Hotel in honour of R. A. Darwin and A. Levin, joint chairmen of the coming United Palestine Campaign. Louis Fitch, K.C., introduced the speaker.

The toast of the two guests of honour was proposed by M. M. Sperber, K.C., who referred to their efforts in the movement for some twenty-five years. Dr. Max Ratner presented the pledges of the Habonim to support the joint chairman in the coming campaign, while bouquets were presented to the wives of the guests. B. M. Weiner, Supreme Host, was toastmaster. Rabbi Harry J. Stern, of Temple Emanu-El and Rabbi H. Abramowitz of the Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue also spoke. Those who sat at the head table included: Dr. Ben Zion Mossinson, R. A. Darwin and Mrs. Darwin, A. Levin and Mrs. Levin, Rabbi J. L. Zlotnik, Louis Fitch, K.C., Rabbi H. J. Stern, Rabbi H. Amramowitz, I. Lande, B. Pereimuter, Dr. M. Ratner, Louis Miller, J. Fineberg, S. G. Bendon, H. H. Sourkes, Bernard L. Cohen, M. M. Sperber, K.C., B. M. Weiner, M. Gelber, of Toronto; H. Sassenwein, M. Fromson, M. M. Schecter, H. Shapiro, Jos. Hestrin, of Winnipeg; H. Block, J. Wasserman, J. N. Knight, I. Malkinson, H. Vechslor.

Dr. Mossinson said that the Balfour declaration was a formal revolution, a revolution against the French Revolution. It proclaimed the rights of the Jewish people to a national home, Palestine. It was the first time that the rights were given to the Jews unconditionally. For the first time they became equal to the other nations of the world.

Dr. Mossinson sketched the history of the Jews for the past 150 years. It was significant he said, to turn back this year, when the tenth anniversary of the Balfour declaration is being observed, a year in which Canadian Jewry has purchased a valuable tract of land in Palestine, to see what forces had motivated towards the present situation. With the French Revolution the Jews emerged from ghetto life. Napoleon's conference at Bordeaux in which the Jews had been asked to explain their position had been marked by their statement that they were a religious group, but that otherwise there was no Jewish people in existence.

"The Jews said they were not a nation, but deep down in their heart they could not cease to be what they were. They could not change their outer appearance nor their inner ego. They remained what they were—Jews," he declared.

The nineteenth century attitude to the Jews had been one of condescending tolerance, out of which had been born intellectual anti-Semitism. But there had also come a Jewish youth that was cognizant of a nationalism, and the two parallel movements had gravitated towards what finally came in the form of the Balfour Declaration in 1917, marking the establishment that the Jews were entitled to Palestine as their homeland. It had been, Dr. Mossinson said, in accordance with general tendencies. The same century which saw these tendencies marked the shifting from the Holy Alliance of 1815 and that same idea which had seen its outburst with the desire in Greece for national independence in 1819, seemed to hit at the heart of Europe. And so the idea of nationalism grew, and to-day, with the Jews as the first to point to the conception of minority rights, other minorities are grateful that this conception was given to the world.

It is right, the speaker maintained, for a nation to live its own life, a life in which it can discharge its duty to create, to exist, to live.

"The Balfour Declaration was part of the great development of the idea of the right of nations to develop their own life. And the Jewish nation has its right to its own place and own life in the land of its forefathers," Dr. Mossinson said.

The French Revolution had fostered rationalism, but later generations had come to realize that back of rationalism lay the historic sense, the sense of an inheritance of the past, so that in one emotional outburst all that is rational can be torn away.

"Psychology found out this inner power and built up a psychology of the masses," the speaker said. And it was with this that the realization had come of the essential need for diversity in culture, and that only by diversity, made possible through the different contributions of peoples, could greater and richer culture be achieved.

PURIM

The Book of Esther is the only book in the Bible which has "hate" as a theme. And it would be well for teachers when they interpret the Purim story to minimize "revenge" and this business of anti-Semitism and interpret the lesson in terms of phil-Semitism. Why not once and for all point out the noble non-Jews who out of love for Israel rendered so much service in the cause of Judaism? It is good to speak on Purim, not of the Hamanists but of the Humanists, such, for example, as Reuchlin, Lessing and Emil Zola, who battled for the cause of our people. Purim would then have a more sublime meaning for most of us.

As this column has hinted before, the cream of the news that reaches the REVIEW has to be withheld from the public for numerous reasons. Only the blameless contributions may be shared as a rule. The others, poor things, have a low visibility and soon land in the waste basket or a guarded scrap book. It will do no harm, however, to show you this (free advertisement). It is anonymous:

"I am a contributor of long standing to your well-known magazine, and I am always on the look-out for news for it.

"I am therefore taking the liberty of sending you the following news, which I hope you will place in your columns:

"It will be of interest to the Toronto Community to learn that the Rev. Louis L. P. Mendoza, of London, England, has arrived in the City with the intention of settling down and making Toronto his home. For the interest of those who are not acquainted with him, it may be well to learn that it is figured that he is the famous Mohal of the old country, having started his career at the age of sixteen, and holding diplomas of the Initiation Society and London Shecheta Board. He has also acted as Minister of the Bermondsey and Rotherhithe Congregation, New Western Synagogue, and Spanish and Portuguese Sephardi Congregation.

"Strange to say, although a Sephardi by birth, he has adapted himself for Sephardi and Ashkanasi congregations alike.

"It is his aim to perform the holy rite of circumcision among the poor as well as the rich, and is only too willing to offer his professional services gratis in this direction."

A solid gold National Fund box will be given to the person who guesses the name of the sender.

Officials of the United Palestine Appeal in Philadelphia have planned to take a referendum vote of contributors to decide whether or not it is advisable to sue those who have pledged sums in the past few years and have not paid up. In that city a pledge to a cause, movement or charity is regarded as a debt and is collectable by law. A man owes $500 when he has pledged that amount and can be sued for it, of course, but is it wise? Will not such action sour him forever on the subject of giving to a campaign? Perhaps one reason the officials must deliberate on the advisability of taking legal action in such cases is that they know they and their system are in part at fault. In the heat of a campaign, in order to get high-sounding amounts that will stimulate others to give perhaps more than they are able to, campaign workers will urge contributors to pledge to-day and pay it all up in three years or more. Then follow those serious comic episodes known as drives to collect pledges. This method is all wrong and it requires no gift of prophesy to say that it will disappear before many more years. It is possible to get a community oversold on causes or movements to the detriment of both community and cause. Why sell a cause on the installment plan at all? It would be better to campaign for funds that may be had in cash than to get a community so in debt that it can't remember all the causes it is assessed for. Considering the cost of collecting pledges and many inevitable losses and considering how fed up a community gets paying to-day for what it pledged in 1925, say, would it not be better to accept what a community can give enthusiastically? It is no sweeter to pay an installment on an old charity pledge than it is on anything else and some tact should be used to keep the paying public from getting fed up. There is no end in sight to the necessity for giving and it should be made a pleasant, comfortable duty instead of an irksome, nagging burden.

leather workers, news agents, domestics, barbers, slaughterers, insurance agents, overall makers, shoe shiners, weavers, cigar makers, grocery storekeepers, mattress makers.

A few of the cases attended to by the Folks Ferein:

Mrs. O——, a widow, four years in Toronto, six children, four of whom are of school age, became ill. Her financial condition was one of extreme poverty—two of her children were working part time only. She did not wish to become a public charge. Her condition was gradually becoming worse, her home was neglected. Her weight was excessive—240 pounds. Physicians could not diagnose her case. Her financial circumstances did not allow her to put herself under the attention of a specialist. She was placed in a hospital, under a specialist's care, her weight was reduced to 180 pounds, her case was diagnosed as gall bladder, and an operation was performed. After a period of ten weeks, Mrs. O—— was discharged as well. She is now enjoying good health, attending to her children.

Mr. L——, an operator, 36 years, six children, ranging in age from a seven-months-old baby to a twelve-year-old child. He worked part time only. He was suffering from severe headaches, and could scarcely attend to his part time work. He was taken to a specialist and X-rayed, and it was found that there was a growth behind his left eye, developing towards the brain. He was admitted to the hospital, a city order was procured, and an operation performed. After four weeks Mr. L—— went home. He is now able to work full time and he is again making a living for his wife and six children.

A young lad, 20 years of age, whose father had been killed in a pogrom in Russia, and whose mother died on board ship on the way to Toronto, arrived here and was learning to become a seamstress. In a very short time he was earning $12.00 per week. He tried to forget his troubles and seemed to manage very well. Soon his eyesight began failing him, until he turned blind. The boy was helpless, he had no friends to whom to turn, he was frantic. Every arrangement was made with the medical and eye specialists in town, and he was taken to the hospital. It was feared at first that he would never regain his eyesight. Nevertheless an operation was performed and it proved successful. He is now so happy to find himself a normal individual again that it is helping him to forget the tragedy that befell his parents.

MENORAH DRAMATIC NIGHT

Two plays were presented in Hart House Theatre Wednesday evening, February 22, by the University of Toronto Menorah Society. The first play, a one-act drama, "Forgotten Souls," was acted by Vera Alexander, Freda Shleser and Jack Gringorten. The theme centred around the attitude of the Jew toward spinsterhood and the setting was the home of a small-town dressmaker. The second play, a satirical comedy named the "Pot Boiler," showed the troubles of a theatrical society on rehearsal night. S. N. Goldhar took the leading role as the exasperated director. Others in the cast: Misses Anne Gussack, Gertrude Houser and Anne Epstein; and Harold Danfman, Joe Lieberman and Harold Minden. At intermission, Naomi Granatstein played the piano and David Raithblatt the violin. Miss Lillian Prager was programme convener; Phil Barrs, property man; and Onie Brown was in charge of stage settings. The ladies who took part in the plays were presented with necklaces by the Society. Sam Goldhar, who directed both plays, was given a silver pen and pencil.

PURITY FLOUR

Recipes

HOMANTASCHE

Soak one-half ounce of yeast in one-half cup of lukewarm milk; when dissolved put in a bowl and stir in one cup of Purity Flour sifted, one teaspoon of sugar and one-fourth teaspoon of salt, mix thoroughly and put in a warm place (not hot) to rise from one to two hours. When well risen cream together one cup of sugar and three-fourths cup of butter, add three eggs, five cups sifted Purity Flour, one cup of milk and one teaspoon of salt, mix together until light, then stir in the risen yeast and with a spoon work well for ten minutes, and set aside to rise again for five or six hours or all night. The dough should not be very stiff. If set at night use one-half the quantity of yeast. Spread with a poppy seed mixture, after cutting into squares, fold into triangles and pinch the edges together. Lay in well-buttered pans, about two inches apart, and let them rise again, spread with poppy seed filling. Take one-half pound of poppy seed (mohn) which have previously been soaked in milk and then ground, add one-quarter of a pound of sugar and the yolks of three eggs. Stir this mixture together in one direction until quite thick and then stir in the beaten whites. Add two ounces of sifted Purity Flour and one-quarter of a pound of melted butter. Fill the tartlets and bake.

PURIM CAKES

Take two cups of Purity Flour, one tablespoon of sugar, add four eggs, two tablespoons of oil; knead all these together, roll out not very thin, cut in squares, close two sides, prick with a fork so they will not blister; put on tins and bake well. Then take one pound of honey, boil and put the squares in this and let boil for a few minutes; then drop in one-quarter pound poppy seeds and put back on fire. When nice and brown sprinkle with a little cold water, take off and put on another dish so that they do not stick to each other.

PURIM HONEY CAKE

One pound of real honey (not jar), one cup of granulated sugar, four eggs, one tablespoon of all spice, three tablespoons of salad oil, four cups of Purity Flour, well sifted; three teaspoons of baking-powder. Heat honey (not hot), rub yolks with sugar, beat whites to a froth, then mix ingredients, add flour and bake in moderate oven for one hour.

funds on family relief. Its major achievement for which it has rightly been lauded has been the personal service it has rendered to Jewish patients in the public hospitals of our community and province. In the larger hospitals, its interpreter makes daily visits, helps the patients adjust themselves, brings them a word of cheer and encouragement. In the smaller hospitals periodic visits are made. During Passover it supplies the Jewish patients in the hospitals with Passover foods, and by thus easing their mental attitudes accelerates their recovery. We ourselves have witnessed the joy and appreciation with which the service of Passover victuals was received. Surgical supplies, hospital bills and doctor's bills also eat up a goodly portion of its income. The work that the Volkverein is rendering is of value to the community and merits support.

Some day we hope that the Volkverein will merge with Federation. Its work could be handled efficiently and capably through Federation's agencies and the ideal of a unified social service organization would be approximated. Until that time comes the work of the Volkverein must be carried on. Let no one who subscribes to the Volkverein feel that that subscription liberates him from his duty to Federation. Nor let anyone who subscribes to Federation feel that he should not contribute towards the good work of the Volkverein.

and retain as much as suits their convenience or comfort. As a matter of fact they cast off more of the bulk of Jewish religion than did the Kacaites who are now outside the Jewish fold. But strangely this small group recognizing its alienation from the body of historic Judaism is straining to establish intimate contacts with the great religion of the non-Jews. Now in Christianity as in Judaism the overwhelming majority accept their faith as it is handed down to them after its historic process of elaboration. In other words Christianity even in its diversified denominations is orthodox in the same sense as we understand the term "orthodox" when applied to Judaism. Perhaps the Unitarian sect is the only counterpart within the embrace of Christianity of our Reform sect. And yet we find that while our Reform friends are moving away from Orthodox Judaism they at the same time are offering terms to Orthodox Christianity. Reform Judaism, at least as presented by some of its exponents, is beginning to regard itself as being distinct generically as well as specifically from the mass of Judaism. It seems to act as if it had no relation to the older Judaism and owed no responsibility to the latter. It could act as a free lance and make any arrangements and alliances it saw fit without recourse to the rest of Judaism.

Well, we shall have in New York a good-will dinner for Orthodox and Reform Jews. The latter may discover that some of the former also know table manners. A. B. B.
